QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1) Whether an intentional refusal by a state court to acknowledge the tort under which a pro se plaintiff brought suit amounts to the denial of meaningful access to the courts guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

2) Whether an intentional refusal by a state appellate court to apply the state's written rules of civil procedure and the state's case law in denying appellate review to a pro se litigant amounts to the denial of due process guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

3) Whether the denial of certiorari to a pro se litigant by a state supreme court when there has been no appellate review on the merits of the case seeking certiorari amounts to the denial of due process and meaningful access to the courts guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the district court is lengthy and pertinent parts are included in the appendix.

Denials of the appeal, petition for rehearing and petition for writ of certiorari are included in the appendix.

JURISDICTION

The Petition for Writ of Certiorari was denied on April 10, 2006. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1257.

STATUTES, RULES, TORTS OR REGULATORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1) 28 U.S.C. 1257 provides, in pertinent part: (a) Final judgments or decrees rendered by the highest court of a State in which a decision could be had, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari where . . . any title, right, privilege or immunity is specially set up or claimed under the Constitution . . . of . . . the United States.

2) Supreme Court Rule 12 (4) provides, in pertinent part: . . . When two or more judgments are sought to be reviewed on a writ of certiorari to the same court and involve identical or closely related questions, a single petition for a writ of certiorari covering all the judgments suffices. . . .

3) C.R.C.P. Rule 59 states, in pertinent parts: Within 15 days of entry of judgment as provided in C.R.C.P. 58 or such greater time as the court may allow, a party may move for post-trial relief . . . If notice of the entry of judgment, decree, or order is transmitted to the parties by mail, the time for the filing of any motion for post-trial relief shall commence from the date of the mailing of the notice [emphasis added].

4) C.R.C.P. Rule 59 6(e) further provides an additional 3 days when service is by mail, as in this case [below].

5) Restatement of the Law, 1948 Supp., Torts, subsection 46. This has been retained, and covered by Comment k, in the Second Restatement of Torts, subsection 46.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1) The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in pertinent part: "No State shall . . . deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law[.]"

2) The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in pertinent part: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging . . . the right of the people . . . to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

3) Article II, Section 25 of the Colorado Constitution: Due process of law. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law.

STATEMENT

In 1997 a near fatal dog attack upon a llama I owned initiated a contentious relationship with my neighbors, Sue Brookman and David Faulkner. When my pet pot-bellied pig was killed a few months later by the same dogs, litigation, prosecuted by the District Attorney's office, ensued. Seven months later the three dogs owned by Brookman and Faulkner were destroyed pursuant to law. The respondents in the instant case, James and Sandra Irvine, friends of Brookman and Faulkner, purchased property adjoining mine. Immediately, a pattern of conduct began which continued over a period of six months which caused severe emotional distress to my wife, Ann L. Ramsey, and myself.

The conduct included (a) filling the cracks between the boards of our deck, on which we enjoyed outdoor meals, with goat dung, (b) causing damage to our private road and making the county road impassable, (c) attaching to our fence converting it to a corral for their animals, (d) causing animal waste to flow onto our property,

(e) littering and placing junk vehicles and machinery in an adjoining meadow, and other insulting and irritating conduct. [R. Vol. 1 at19:12 – 24:8, Id. At 155:17 – 159:6, Id. 159:7 – 160:13; R. Vol. 12, at 352:25 – 353:18, Id. At 150:14 – 164:9; 221:22 – 229:20, Id. At 127:5 – 139:7; 140:1-12; Vol. 12, at 260:15 – 265:12; 271:19 -276:2, R. Vol. 11, at 24:11 – 25:14, R. Vol. 12, at 277:15 – 279:14; 299:13 – 300:1, R. Vol. 11, at 121:19 – 123:1, Id. At 79:10 – 90:16, R. Vol. 11, at 165:19-22, R. Vol. 11, at 99:23 – 101:18; 192:18 – 199:11, R. Vol. 12, at 280:24 – 290:24; 169:14 – 171;14, R. Vol. 12, at 345:8 – 347:14.] M.B.M. Co., Inc. v. Counce, sustained a claim of extreme and outrageous conduct by the mere withholding of funds from an employees last paycheck.

I attempted to communicate with the Irvines to no avail. Resolved that the pattern of conduct was not going to continue, I had to choose between taking the law into my own hands by violent means, which was growing more imminent with each successive act in the pattern of conduct, or resolving the matter in a civil manner. Making the correct choice, and after exhausting all possible administrative options for resolution, I turned to the only forum remaining – civil court.

Being a natural citizen of the United States and reasonably educated I decided it would be unfair to have to spend thousands of dollars on an attorney I could not afford and chose to responsibly proceed pro se. My initial complaint and amended complaint in District Court set forth my claims of intentional (or reckless, equivalent under Colorado law) infliction of emotional distress.

In numerous documents in the record, such as briefs, proposed finding of fact and judgment and motions for post trial relief, I continually reiterated my cause of action, intentional infliction of emotion distress, and its elements.

The trial court ruled my case to be frivolous, groundless or vexatious and ruled for the defendants on their claim of abuse of process and assessed approximately $17,000 in attorney's fees against me. I hired counsel and appealed. The appellate court vacated the ruling and remanded the case for further proceedings. We filed a motion for a new trial. The district court had "lost" all but a small portion of the record of the defense's case and the reconstruction we presented pursuant to C.A.R. 10 was denied. However, the trial court ruled that the record of the case was sufficient because it failed to make a prima facie case. I again appeared pro se. The re-trial was limited to whether or not I "knew, or reasonably should have known," I had no right to bring my action. I knew I had the right pursuant to the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, which provides, in pertinent part: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging . . . the right of the people . . . to petition the government for a redress of grievances, and pursuant to Article II Section 25 of the Constitution of the State of Colorado and I knew the conduct evidenced in the record caused extreme emotional distress to my then-wife Ann L. Ramsey and myself.

Consistently refusing to acknowledge the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress and its elements, which I again presented to the court, the court ruled in favor of the defendants and now assessed $17,208 in attorney fees against me.

I filed a Rule 59 Motion for post trial relief. It was deemed denied for the reason it was not ruled upon in the allotted time. I appealed. The appellate court found my rule 59 motion not timely filed and issued a show cause order why my appeal should not be dismissed on that ground. That action was taken Sua Sponte, and in violation of state supreme court case law [A court of review will assume that an extension was properly made, in the absence of proper objections to the order of the court.

Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949) and analogously in Brewster v. Nandrea, 705 P.2d 1 Colo.1985 Refusal to enlarge time was an abuse of discretion where the failure to timely file was due to the failure of the clerk of the court of appeals to mail copies of the court of appeals opinion to the third party defendants as required by C.A.R. 36".],. I responded by demonstrating pursuant to rule that my motion not only was timely, but notice was not timely served. [see affidavit at appendix E] [The essence of procedural due process is fundamental fairness. This embodies adequate advance notice and an opportunity to be heard prior to state action resulting in deprivation of a significant property interest. City & County of Denver v. Eggert, 647 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982).] The appellate court simply dismissed the appeal.

I filed a petition for writ of certiorari with the State Supreme Court on the basis of the denial of Due Process pursuant to Article 25 of the Colorado State Constitution. The petition was denied.

After eight years of litigation, it is nowhere reflected in any of the rulings that the petitioner and his wife experienced the conduct of the respondents and suffered the emotional distress evidenced in the record.

People ex rel. Juhan v. District Court, 165 Colo. 253, 439 P.2d 741 (1968). 165 Colo. 253, 439 P.2d 741 (1968). "Law" in the expression "due process of law" does not mean that whatever process is provided by the general assembly shall be the measure of the protection provided by the due process clause. Such a construction would render the guaranty mere nonsense for it would then mean no state shall deprive a person of life, liberty, or property, unless the state shall choose to do so.

ARGUMENT / REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

When a citizen of this country seeks relief from a civil problem in the courts he has a right to be heard, implicit in the first and fourteenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution. This court has ruled that access to the courts must be meaningful in numerous cases, one of which is Walters v. Radiation Survivors, 473 U.S. 305 (1985) Walters v. National Association of Radiation Survivors. Public trust in the courts demands that citizens be heard. Being heard doesn't mean being allowed to speak; it means a ruling reflects that he has been heard, and if denied, reasonably denied. The elements of the tort must be addressed. Otherwise, there is no meaningful access to the courts. The court utterly ignores the portion of C.R.C.P. 59 which says it is not the date of entry of Judgment, but the day the Judgment is mailed, if it is mailed, as it was in this case, five days after entry of judgment, on January 12, 2005, that tolls the time for filing post trial motions for relief.

"Draconian" comes to mind when one considers a 5 minute delay in an eight year long litigation when the trial court granted a one day extension that made the filing timely; and the improper notice has never been addressed. There is nothing in the record refuting my contention that I was not properly notified for purposes of tolling time to file for post trial relief (nonetheless, my rule 59 motion for post trial relief was only 5 minutes late) and the trial judge alluded to the improper notification in granting the one day extension [see appendix F] that was reversed sua sponte by the appellate court. Substantial justice has not been done.

Denial of my petition for writ of certiorari by the State Supreme Court effectively eliminated any review on the merits of my case.

The public view is that no matter how much a pro se litigant respects the system or how responsibly he or she performs their duty to the best of their ability (pro se litigants, after all, are not trained lawyers), they will not be heard. As a nation, we cannot, we must not, teach our children values only to treat them like fools when they try to live by them as adults. Public trust in the legal system is seriously eroded and must be restored if the deaths of our citizens to instill a democracy halfway around the world is not to be reduced to a mockery by the erosion of the democracy in this country. Meaningful access to the courts must be preserved, even to the level of a single, average individual citizen.

The court has found that I knew or reasonably should have known not to bring my lawsuit. The constitutional guarantee of Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of happiness mentioned in the constitution has been obliterated. Zavilla v. Masse, 112 Colo. 183, 147 P.2d 823 (1944).

"Liberty", as used in this section and section 3 of this article, connotes far more than mere freedom from physical restraint; it is broad enough to protect one from governmental interference in the exercise of his intellect, in the formation of opinions, in the expression of them and in action or inaction dictated by his judgment, or choice in countless matters of purely personal concern.

Rule 10 delimits the matters for Supreme Court review. It is an important question of federal law whether an individual, acting responsibly, truly has a meaningful right to represent himself or herself in a court of law, and that matter should be settled by this court in favor of the constitution.

The lower court needs the supervision of this court to insure the constitution is to be upheld. Finally, this case is not a misapplication of a properly stated rule of law; it is an intentional refusal to apply at all a properly stated rule of law.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted:

APPENDIX

A. DISTRICT COURT RULING

Garfield County, Colorado: District Court G98CV140 Div. C Plaintiffs: Robert W. Ramsey and Ann L. Ramsey v. Defendants: James Irvine and Sandra Irvine.

In pertinent part: (22) From August 17, 1999 through March 18, 2004, the Irvines incurred attorneys' fees of $18,190. Of this total, $430 was incurred after the entry of the Original Judgment but before the filing of the appeal; $15,560 was incurred as the result of the Ramseys' appeal and their consequent motion for new trial; and $2,200 was incurred after the Court granted the Motion for New Trial through the day prior to the new trial. Additional fees were incurred for the new trial itself.

(23) Whether or not the Irvines are entitled to an award of their fees on appeal depends upon whether or not the appeal lacked substantial justification. The jurisdiction to make this decision or to refer the issue back to the trial court for decision belongs to the court to which the appeal was made, namely the Court of Appeals. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d. 626, 628-29 (Colo. App. 1992). The Court of Appeals took neither step. This Court is without authority to award the Irvines their costs and fees on appeal.

(24) In the Original Judgment, the Court concluded the measure of damages for abuse of process is the fees incurred to defend the wrongful litigation, not the fees incurred to prosecute the abuse of process claim. Technical Computer Services v. Buckley, 844 P.2d. 1249, 1256 (Colo.App. 1992). The same rationale applies to the prosecution of a claim for fees under section 13-17-102, C.R.S.

After the granting of the Motion for New Trial, fees incurred by the Irvines were fees incurred to prosecute their affirmative claims for attorneys' fees. An award for fees and costs incurred to complete the new trial is not warranted.

(25. The Court has considered the factors set forth in section 13-17-103 to the extent that evidence was presented on the factors. The discussion above applies to those factors. Therefore, on the 13-17-102 claim and on the abuse of process claim, judgment is entered in favor of the Irvines and against the Ramseys, jointly and severally, for attorneys' fees in the sum of $17, 208 ($14,348 in fees through August 3, 1999, plus $2, 430 in additional fees through August 16, 1999, plus $430 in additional fees prior to the filing of the appeal) and costs in the sum of $90.

Done on January 7, 2005. By the Court "s/J.B.Boyd".

B. ORDER DENYING APPEAL

Colorado Court of Appeals No. 05CA1277

ORDER . Robert W. Ramsey, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. James Irvine and Sandra Irvine, Defendants-Appellees.

Upon consideration of the response to the Order to show cause and the affidavit from the clerk of the district court, the Court Dimisses the appeal. The trial court may grant extensions for filing post-trial motions as long as the request made within the 15-day period. C.R.C.P 59(a); c.r.c.p. 6(b)(1). The trial court may not extend the time for filing post-trial motions when the extension request is not timely made. C.R.C.P. 6(b)(2); Schuster v. Zwicker, 659P.2d 687 (Colo.1983).

Here, appellant did file a motion for extension to file C.R.C.P. 59 relief until February 1, 2005. The time to file a motion for extension expired on January 24, 2005. Therefore, the Court determines that the notice of appeal was not timely filed and was filed beyond the jurisdictional time limits of the Court. By the Court: Vogt, J., Carparelli, J., Loeb, J. Dated Sept. 19, 2005.

C. ODER DENYING PETITION FOR REHEARING

Colorado Court of Appeals No. 05CA1277 ORDER . Robert W. Ramsey, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. James Irvine and Sandra Irvine, Defendants-Appellees.

Upon consideration of the petition for rehearing, the Court DENIES the petition. A judgment was entered by the district court on January 7, 2005. Therefore, any motion for extension to file post-trial relief was due 15 days plus 3 days for mailing later, which is January 25, 2005. The motion was not filed until February 1, 2005, which is a full seven days later.

By the Court: Vogt, J., Carparelli, J., Loeb, J. Dated Sept. 19, 2005.

D. ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR CERTIORARI

SUPREME COURT, STATE OF COLORADO CASE NO. 06SC52 CERTIORARI TO THE COURT OF APPEALS, 05CA1277 DISTRICT COURT, GARFIELD COUNTY, 98CV140 Petitioner: Robert W. Ramsey, v. Respondent: James Irvine and Sandra Irvine. ORDER OF COURT Upon consideration of the Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the Colorado Court of Appeals and after review of the record, briefs, and the judgment of said Court of Appeals, IT IS THIS DAY ORDERED that said Petition for Writ opf Certiorari shall be, and the same hereby is, DENIED. BY THE COURT, EN BANC, APRIL 10, 2006.

1) Prior to the hearing from which the appealed ruling issued, at the request of the Judge of the District Court, I supplied the Clerk of the District Court with my current correct mailing address in Grand Lake, Colorado.

2) In January of 2005 the appealed ruling was entered and was not mailed to me at the correct address referred to in section (1) above, herein, but was mailed instead to my old address in New Castle, Colorado. I rarely frequent New Castle and did not receive that copy of the ruling until sometime in March or April.
3) In a motion filed with the District Court on February 1st, 2005, I explained to the District Court Judge that the ruling had not been mailed to me at my correct address and having been made aware by my ex-wife/co-litigant of the ruling having been mailed to her I suspected my notice went to my old address.
4) Within approximately one week after February 7th, 2005, I received notice of the ruling at issue from the District Court by U.S. Mail in my Grand Lake, Colorado, Post Office Box.
5) My rule 59 Motion was premised on the copy of the ruling mailed to me by my ex-wife/co-litigant on or around January 21st,2005.
And I affirm that the foregoing is true except as to statements made upon information and belief, and as to those I believe them to be true.

STATEMENT OF GROUNDS / JURISDICTION

This petition for rehearing presents material not previously presented that should be of a controlling nature. The material would have been irrelevant prior to the denial of my petition for a writ of certiorari by this court of last appeal. The violation of my rights under the State and Federal Constitutions and the Code of Judicial Conduct is directed to this Court.

The Petition for Writ of Certiorari was denied by the Colorado Supreme Court on April 10, 2006. The jurisdiction of this Court was invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1257. Certiorari was denied by this Court on October 2, 2006. This petition was placed in the U.S. Mail on November 16, 2006 in accordance with the provisions of the letter from this Court requiring resubmission.

STATUTES, RULES, TORTS OR REGULATORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1. Colorado Jury Instructions 3d
   (a) A series of acts may constitute outrageous conduct, even though any one of the acts might be considered only an isolated unkindness or insult [emphasis added]. CJI 3d 23:2 p.73.
   (b) The duration and intensity of emotional distress are factors to be considered in determining its severity. CJI 3d 23:4 p. 78.
   (c) A factor which is not expressly articulated in the Restatement, but which is notable in its absence in many of the cases in which recovery has been denied for failure to show actionable extreme and outrageous conduct on the part of the defendant - > and which is present in many of the cases allowing recovery is a pattern of offending behavior over a period of time. The test for actionable outrage has been characterized as whether the accumulation of the defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff, even if any individual instance of such conduct would not be outrageous on its own merits, clearly goes beyond what would be merely offensive to a reasonable person and exceeds all bounds of decency. AmJur 43 POF 2d 43-1 § 8 pp. 48,49.

2. Whether the defendant's behavior is viewed as a course of conduct or as a single incident, "it is the totality of conduct that must be evaluated to determine whether outrageous conduct has occurred." Zalnis v. Thoroughbred Datsun Car Co., 645 P.2d 292, 294 (Colo.App. 1982).

3. Rules of the US Supreme Court, Rule 44, which provides for this petition within 25 days of denial of a petition for a writ of Certiorari. [Also see Certificate of filing on page 12 of this petition].

4. Wyo. 1905. "Spite fences" are fences, often high and unsightly, erected to annoy a neighbor or adjoining landowner by obstructing his air, light, or view. Anthony Wilkinson Live Stock Co. v. McIlquam, 83 P. 364, 14 Wyo. 209 3 L.R.A.N.S. 733.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1. The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in pertinent part: Congress shall make no law . . . abridging . . . the right of the people . . . to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

2. The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution § 1 provides, in pertinent part:
   . . . All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.
3. The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides, in pertinent part: No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. . . .
4. Article II Section 25 of the Colorado Constitution: Due process of law. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law.
5. Article II Section 3 of the Colorado Constitution: Inalienable rights. All persons have certain natural, essential and inalienable rights . . . .

STATEMENT OF BACKGROUND

A. CORRECTIONS

1) The law of the case represented by the [annotated] Colorado Jury Instructions and American Jurisprudence was omitted from the Petition for a Writ of Certiorari and included here.
2) In the Petition for a Writ of Certiorari, the reference to the guarantee of the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness was incorrectly attributed to the US Constitution when it is, of course, from the Declaration of Independence.

B. RESPECT

1) In the first ruling from the District Court I was analogously referred to as "Felix" of the "Odd Couple"[1] and told my situation with my neighbors created nothing much beyond "a social discomfort, however pronounced" [see Appendix A, p.11].

As the Honorable Sandra Day O'Connor once pointed out, sometimes findings of lower courts are so intertwined with a violation of a person's Constitutional rights that they have to be looked at even though findings are not usually grounds for review by this court.

My testimony and Ann L. Ramsey's testimony [in the record] unmistakably describes our feelings about the conduct of the Defendants and the emotional costs to us.

The killing and maiming of my family pets, the cleaning up of goat dung from my deck, the repairing of my damaged road, the construction of a "spite fence",[2] the attachment to my fence built with my own hands to convert it to the Defendants' corral, and the waste flowing from the Defendants property onto mine, and more [all in the record] resulted in much more than "social discomfort" and I am not asking for the right to feel that way - the right is inalienable and does not come from the judiciary and it will not be taken away by the judiciary.

Nonetheless, I understood my responsibility to demonstrate that my concerns were shared by the community in which I lived. The neighbors who testified were a realtor, a lawyer, a bank vice-president, two veterinarians [expert witnesses], a building inspector and his wife, a horse expert, and a sheet metal worker [all in the record]. The Defense presented the realtor who sold the Defendants their property and a now deceased neighbor who could not even identify photos of the vehicle he testified about and neither witness stated much more than they thought everything was alright with them [in the "lost" record].

At one point the Judge interrupted my attempt to evidence community agreement[3] by stating, "You haven't been contradicted on that point yet, Mr. Ramsey". Of course, I never was contradicted on that point until the ruling was made and then I was contradicted only by the judge, never by any witness.

[2] As far back as 1905 the Courts of Wyoming enjoined fences built for the purpose of annoying a landowner or adjoining neighbor. Anthony Wilkinson Live Stock Co. v. McIlquam, 83 P. 364, 14 Wyo. 209 3 L.R.A.N.S. 733. The Defendants submitted dozens of photos [all in the remaining record] of other fences in the area to support the notion that their fence was "normal", yet, there is not one single photo of a parallel fence in the proximity of another fence.

[3] [R Volume 2, p.296] Robert W. Ramsey: "What I'm trying to - - what I'm trying to get into evidence is that the feelings of the Plaintiffs are not unusual, are not something that another reasonable member of the community would[sic] feel under the same circumstances.

Nonetheless, Judge DeVilbiss, decided not to enjoin or admonish the conduct of the Defendants and he ruled that my wife and I only experienced a "social discomfort". The Judge also felt free to ignore the testimony of the respectable people who testified on our behalf.

Such conduct by a District Court Judge violates the Code of Judicial Conduct and the State and Federal Constitutions and basic precepts of what is fair and right.

2. In the second ruling from the District Court I was said to lack the common sense of a reasonable person and that caused me to commit a "folly" in objecting to the Defendants' fence [see Appendix B, p.11]. I was told my legal research should have made my folly apparent.[4] When I informed the court in a motion for post judgment relief that spite fences have been enjoined by other reasonable people [see footnote [2] p.5] there was no response and no change in the ruling. I was simply ignored.

To intentionally ignore longstanding precedent and the elements of the tort [law], and to ignore the good people of a neighborhood, and supplant it all with a subjectively biased and personal view is intolerable conduct on the part of a public servant entrusted with the responsibility of exercising the power given to him by the people he is to serve in accordance with the limits and responsibilities granted by the Code of Judicial Conduct and the State and Federal Constitutions. The violation is or should be criminal.

[4] Just as fraud can be the underlying fact in an action for unjust enrichment instead of specifically pleading fraud, the "spite fence" was one underlying fact in my action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

ARGUMENT / REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

It is understandable that mistakes will be made by the Judiciary; mistakes are made in every field of human activity. But when the mistake has been repeatedly exposed and repeatedly ignored by men who are too intelligent to be unable to see the facts and the law and relate the two reasonably, then the conduct must be deemed intentional.

I am not so naive as to think there will not be a gap between the ideal and the actual. But when the gap becomes a chasm that is hurting innocent lives, then something has to be done.

When I made the decision to address my problem with my neighbors in a civil manner rather that acting outside the law in anger,[5] I chose not to become a criminal but instead to be a responsible citizen. The Judiciary has ruled I had no right to seek a civil resolution and therefore no access to the courts. It is unacceptable in the United States of America to put a citizen in the position of either becoming a criminal or simply putting up with another's conduct that has been deemed intolerable in a civilized community.

The rules require that I state how this case is important to America. Simply, accountability in government is a basic principle in America, and the Judiciary has escaped it for so long it appears to believe it is permanently immune from accountability. In their declaration of independence our forefathers cited King George for ignoring their petitions and we will not live under King George again.

[5] As recently as the 1980's a young man, Mr. Mike Porter, in our rural area lost his life when guns became involved in a similar dispute he was having with his neighbor. It is common enough that most of us know of it happening now and again. In recent years nationwide news told the story of a man in nearby Granby, Colorado, who armored a bulldozer and destroyed many public and private buildings before killing himself.

This court can review this case and issue a ruling that can be read and understood by any normal citizen who expends the effort. Every American citizen (who gives the Judiciary its power) rightly expects a reasoned, restrained, and lawful ruling, not an edict from on high.

This is the last chance the Judiciary has to correct itself in my particular case. If it fails to correct itself, then rather than allow it to turn citizens who want to do what is right into criminals, the citizens of this country will make punishable the violation of a judge's sworn oath to uphold the Code of Judicial Conduct and the Constitutions of the State and Federal Government.

The movement is already underway in such formats as J.A.I.L. for Judges. The Honorable Sandra Day O'Connor has written on the subject[6] and I want to make absolutely clear that I am not suggesting, nor would I condone or in any way support the threat of physical harm to any member of the judiciary.

As our forefathers said, when a government becomes abusive to the point of being intolerable, and it has in my case as well as in many others[7], then it should be abolished or amended. If necessary, it will be lawfully amended.

[6] See J.A.I.L. for Judges website for complete text.

[7] The Jail for Judges citizen initiative in South Dakota required the collection of over thirty thousand signatures in support of making judges accountable for violations of their sworn duty. At approximately the

The $17,000 sanction against me is insulting beyond belief. To think the court would demand I pay a person who invented a money motive for my suit, and attempted to sustain it by manipulating the rules of evidence, when my wife and I had to endure the killing and maiming of our family pets and the desecration of our sacred home is insulting beyond belief.

Only because I believe it is important for this court to know my motives in this matter I must tell you the following:

I easily qualify for bankruptcy because of the loss of my business in 2004.[8] However, I come from the old school that believes bankruptcy is absolutely a last resort because dishonoring debts is unethical on its face and I have not chosen avail myself of the relief. If justice does not prevail in this case and the ruling against me is not reversed I have no choice and no guilt regarding bankruptcy absolving me of this debt. This case is not about money – it is about living in a civil society many people have died to create and protect and it is about a civil institution serving the people it is intended to serve within its proscribed limits.

Finally, this is not a petition from a "grumpy old man" who is incapable of reasoning beyond "folly". It is from an American citizen who demands to be treated fairly by the government empowered to serve him and who is dedicated to changing the procedure if the current one cannot or does not work.

1200 signatures mark it was reported that not a single person had refused to sign.

[8] The recent changes in bankruptcy laws have little or no effect on me because my income doesn't come close to the median income for my state.

CONCLUSION

Thus far the judiciary has violated the code of judicial conduct, the state and federal constitutions, failed to provide proper notice, ignored rules of civil procedure, ignored the [tort] law of the case and its elements, lost a significant portion of the record,[9] ignored respectable testimony and refused to review lower court conduct in any meaningful sense. What more would the judiciary have to do to warrant correction by this court?

When this litigation began I had as much faith in the Judiciary as anyone could have. I defended it throughout and had no doubt it would correct itself. I am one ruling away from knowing I was wrong and something has to be done.

With this filing I have done everything possible within the legal system to resolve this matter. This is the court of last resort; but it is not the last resort. If it falls on me I will not tire nor quit until we succeed in making the judiciary accountable when it intentionally violates its sworn duty; the abuse of power will be curtailed.

This case is not very complex; in fact, it is quite simple and should not be inordinately time consuming for this court. After all the costs to me in time and money I am still willing, if this court requires it, to appear in person, armed with only a blank notepad and pen to record points of questions any Justice might have regarding the law or facts of this case, and answer those questions.

[9] The legislature established "Courts of Record" for a good reason and I have been deprived of the opportunity to show the nonsensical nature of the defense of this case.

I respectfully request this court grant my petition for a writ of certiorari and ultimately overturn the lower courts and/or remand this case for a proper ruling based on the law of the case or remand it for a proper appeal.

Finally, this petition is dedicated to my former wife, Ann L. Ramsey, who suffered more than anyone from the failure of the legal system to fulfill its responsibilities.

APPENDIX A

Garfield County, Colorado: District Court G98CV140 Div. C Plaintiffs: Robert W. Ramsey and Ann L. Ramsey v. Defendants: James Irvine and Sandra Irvine.

(In pertinent part) This unsuitability does not however create much beyond a social discomfort, however pronounced. This is an "Odd Couples" case in which, regrettably, Felix (played by Jack Lemon and here represented by the Ramseys) brought suit against Oscar (played by Walter Matthau and here represented by the Irvines).

DONE AND ORDERED this 10th day of February, 2000 Nunc Pro Tunc August 5, 1999 BY THE COURT: "s/J.E. DeVilbiss, Judge".

APPENDIX B

Garfield County, Colorado: District Court G98CV140 Div. C Plaintiffs: Robert W. Ramsey and Ann L. Ramsey v. Defendants: James Irvine and Sandra Irvine.

(In pertinent part) 16. Common sense would alert a reasonable person to the folly in a theory that grants the person a right to build one-and-half [sic] feet from his property line but denies his neighbor the right to do the same. Mr. Ramsey's legal research should have made this folly more obvious.

Done on January 7, 2005. BY THE COURT "s/J.B. Boyd" District Court Judge.

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I certify that the attached PETITION FOR REHEARING is submitted in good faith and not for the purpose of delay. Its grounds are other substantial grounds not previously presented.

I certify under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on October 27, 2006 and again on November 16, 2006 [resubmission date].
